CHIEF M'CRADY ISSUES 14 TAGS UNDER NEW LAW

Two-Hour Parking Statute Violated on First Day of Enforcement
$2 FINE FACED BY ALL
Few Cars Exempt, Police Head Informs Business Men

Fourteen motorists received tags Monday morning to report to Mayor W. J. Graham for violation of the two-hour parking regulation in the downtown district.

Enforcement of the regulation, that became effective Nov. 6, but was delayed until signs could be erected, started Monday. The first check of the restricted district was made shortly after 9 a. m. by Patrolman Fred Fitzpatrick. The tags were issued by Police Chief William McCrady between 11 a. m. and 12 noon.

Plenty of Warning
"I feel motorists have had plenty of warning and if they get a ticket for violating the regulation they can expect to put $2 on the deck," McCrady said.

"If they fail to report on those tags and we issue summons to bring them in it's going to cost them more than $2. They're not going to make 'monkeys' out of the police department on this regulation."

Safety Director Charles O. Casey issued orders to the police department to enforce the regulation "to the letter."

Few Are Exempt
Numerous business men have asked the department whether or not their personal cars would be exempt from the regulation. Chief McCrady informed them the only cars that would be exempt are those used strictly for business purposes and this, to his understanding, meant largely delivery trucks.

He informed a plumber and electrician if their cars were tagged they could explain their cases to the mayor. Physicians' cars are exempt under the ordinance.

The minimum fine under the regulation is $2.

MILLS PROPERTY IS INVOLVED IN ACTION FOR TAX

Another suit for the collection of delinquent taxes, assessments, penalties and interest and for an order of sale was filed in common pleas court Monday.

The action was filed by Robert G. Colville, as county treasurer, against The First National Bank of Toledo, and asks $6,031.55.

The real estate involved is the Maize mills property on W. Main street. The property is involved also in a civil action in court.

Santa Claus To Arrive Wednesday At 4 O'clock

Letter Received From Old Saint Nick Urging All Kiddies to be Present

REINDEERS ARE RESTING

Stores to be Decorated For Opening of Season

Santa Claus is coming to Circleville. Yes sir! And the time for his visit is about 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon.

The arrival of old Saint Nick will officially open the holiday season in Circleville. All business men are urged to have their stores decorated for the arrival of Santa.

That Santa Claus will be here was ascertained Monday when The Daily Herald received the following note:

"Dear Friends:
"I'm planning to make a visit to Circleville on Wednesday at 4 o'clock. My reindeers are resting for Christmas, but I'll have a string of ponies pulling my sleigh."

"This trip will be a preliminary check up before Christmas, as I'd like to become acquainted with all of you in Circleville. Just write me a letter and drop it in the barrel at Court and Main streets."

"I'm told that Circleville and Pickaway county have the best children in the world, so be sure to tell all of them to be downtown when I arrive. I'll have a gift for each."

Santa Claus

A royal welcome is assured Santa Claus when he arrives in Circleville. There will be two bands to greet him and all the youngsters in the city and county are urged to join the parade. Dog and pony teams, wagons and sleighs will be welcomed to the parade.

The Circleville Christmas program will be the most elaborate in many years.

Court and Main streets will be decorated; merchandise prizes are planned in a home lighting and decorating contest with judging to be between Dec. 2 and Dec. 25, and a store decoration contest is arranged.

The annual community Christmas tree will again be placed at the courthouse, with Santa Claus to return Christmas eve for another distribution of toys.

All civic organizations are combining to make the Christmas season the best in many years.

KING IS WARNED NOT TO MARRY WALLY SIMPSON

LONDON, Nov. 30.—(UP)—Sources usually acquainted with the cabinet's activities said today that Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin has informed King Edward he can expect no support from government or parliament for a possible marriage to Mrs. Wallis Simpson.

This is reliably understood to be the result of two dramatic secret meetings which Baldwin had Friday, shortly after a surprise cabinet meeting. The first meeting was with Clement Attlee, labor party leader, the second with the king.

The government viewed the situation as so delicate that all reference to Baldwin's visit to the king was omitted from the court circular, which customarily records such visits automatically.

It was understood that Baldwin's meeting with Attlee established a common front of conservative and labor parties on their attitude toward the friendship between the king and Mrs. Simpson, and left no doubt that the friendship had precipitated one of the most serious constitutional crises of modern times.

Unusual Christmas Present

BECAUSE the municipal electric light system at Martins Ferry, Ohio, has a balance of $250,000 in the treasury, Mayor Lee Woods ordered this unique Christmas card mailed to patrons of the company. The card, in traditional holiday colors, resembles the regular monthly light bill. "Paid" is stamped across the December statement to all consumers.

COUNTESS KILLS HUSBAND, FACES MURDER CHARGE

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 30.—(UP)—Beautiful Consetta Leone Nigreda threatened suicide today as she awaited arraignment on the charge that she killed her husband Vladimir, reputed Georgian prince. The "prince" and his wife separated two months ago. She had threatened to kill herself if he left her. Instead, it was charged, she shot him dead Saturday night as he talked with the Finnish vice consul, Leo K. Graunross, outside the consul's home.

The "princess's" first husband was Juan M. Velasco, former purchasing agent for the national railways of Mexico. Before his death they lived in New York, and it was understood a son of 16 and a daughter of 14 by their marriage were somewhere in the United States.

INDIANA POLICE CAPTURE YOUNG BANDIT ASLEEP

ELNORA, Ind., Nov. 30.—(UP)—George Emmett Daffron, 26-year-old desperado who gave up without argument when he woke up in a cornfield with police guns pointing at his head, waited for officers to decide today whether to prosecute him for kidnapping or robbery, in Indiana or Ohio.

Daffron, Vincennes, Ind., youth who once boasted he would not be taken alive, was wanted in Ohio and Indiana on kidnapping charges and in several places on robbery charges.

Police found him in the rear seat of a stolen automobile parked in a cornfield. With him was Miss Lillian Simpson, 21, Middletown, O. Both surrendered quickly.

Daffron told his captors the reason he was not armed was that Chicago police picked him up Thanksgiving day. They took two guns from him, got into their car, and told him to follow in his, Daffron said. Daffron drove the opposite way.

DETECTIVE DIES IN FALL FROM 14-FOOT PORCH

COLUMBUS, Nov. 30.—(UP)—Detective John P. Sears, 46, accompanied by a fellow officer from Columbus and three Toledo detectives in a search of a Toledo murder suspect, knocked at the back door of a squalid second-floor apartment early today.

Receiving no response, he kicked at the door in an attempt to crash it. It flew back, knocking him against a rotten railing which collapsed. He somersaulted 14 feet to an alley below, landing head first. He was instantly killed.

The Columbus officer, E. F. Mathis, and the Toledo detectives—George Eckerman, Ralph Murphy and Ted Bressfield—temporarily abandoned their search. They said they would resume the search sometime today.

ARGUMENT LEADS TO CHARGES IN MAYOR'S COURT

Grover Smith, 52, Lancaster pike, waived examination in Mayor W. J. Graham's court Monday and was bound to the grand jury under $200 bond on a charge of assault in a menacing manner. The charge was filed by Milton Manson, Lancaster pike. Smith furnished bond.

Officers said the charge grew out of an argument Saturday night. Smith posted $50 bond in police court after his arrest to report Monday morning.

NEW CARBURETOR TO PROVIDE 200 MILES A GALLON

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 30.—(UP)—A "mystery" carburetor which, its inventor claims, will enable an automobile to travel more than 200 miles on a gallon of gasoline, is being secretly tested here, it became known today.

The inventor is Charles Nelson Pogue, 38, of Winnipeg, Man., and his backers include John E. Hammett, millionaire Canadian mine promoter.

A car equipped with Pogue's carburetor, it was said, is being driven continuously, day and night, over Ontario roads.

There will be approximately 1,400 applications in Pickaway county under the program.

TWO MOTORISTS FACING CHARGES

Girl Suffers Broken Arm in Wreck; County Car Damaged, Too

Clyde Tootle paid a fine of $100 and costs to H. O. Eveland, justice of peace, at noon Monday on a charge of driving when intoxicated. His rights to drive were suspended for six months.

To create a disturbance in a Lancaster pike filling station, and to knock over a mail box with his automobile are bad enough, but to damage the automobile of a deputy sheriff who is assigned to arrest him is too much.

Clyde Tootle, 60, of near Williamsport, is in the county jail after colliding with the county car driven by Deputy Sheriff Robert Armstrong Saturday night. Tootle didn't give him a chance, Armstrong says, even driving his machine without lights.

The deputy charges Tootle with operating an automobile when intoxicated.

Two fenders and a running board on the Ford driven by Armstrong were damaged. The deputy was accompanied by Frank Goff, juvenile officer. Neither was injured.

James Mahoney, 21, of Route 2, Laureville, is being questioned by the sheriff's department in the investigation of an auto mishap Saturday night on Route 56 near Leislerville.

Officers said a car driven by Mahoney left the highway and a passenger, Mable Bailey, 19, of South Perry, suffered a broken right forearm. Dr. E. R. Austin was called to give first aid and Miss Bailey was removed to Berger hospital for treatment. She was discharged later.

Mahoney appeared at the police department after the accident to inquire where to find the hospital.

Two Others Unhurt
Lerna Azzell, 21, Rockbridge, and Luther Neff, Adelphi, riding in the car, escaped serious injury.

A black and white cab of Chillicothe, driven by Russell R. Rhinehardt, Chillicothe, Route 7, and the auto of Clem Hines, Ashville, R.F.D., were damaged early Sunday in a collision on Route 23 about 14 miles north of Circleville. No one was injured.

A charge of reckless operation against Charles George, Circleville, Route 5, was dismissed in police court Monday morning. It was filed by H. P. Rheyne, West Mansfield, and grew out of a traffic accident Nov. 21 at Court and High streets.

TRAVELER REPORTS GERMANS, ITALIANS ON SPANISH SOIL

GIBRALTAR, Nov. 30.—(UP)—A traveler who came from Seville today asserted that 5,000 Germans arrived there Saturday, wearing Spanish Fascist shirts with khaki trousers and German army boots. He said also that German anti-aircraft guns were being mounted at Seville.

Other persons arriving from nationalist territory said they saw 30 Italian light tanks, each fitted with two machine guns, and a small cannon, proceeding to the Malaga front.

NEW NAVY BUILDING PLAN IS DISCLOSED

Many Millions Appropriated for Building as Germany's War Minister Announces Nation Stronger Than in 1914

RUSSIA HAS 7,000 AIRPLANES READY

Belgium, too, Joins Britain in Declaration Of Intent in Case of New European War

BY UNITED PRESS
TODAY'S DEVELOPMENTS IN THE WORLD POLITICAL SITUATION:

MADRID—Loyalists await international and Moorish reinforcements; international division repels two fierce nationalist attacks.

PARIS—France to announce close support of Great Britain in any attack and to launch $700,000,000 navy program.

MOSCOW—Assistant aviation chief announced Russia has 7,000 war planes.

BERLIN—Goering announced Germany is not as "weak" as in 1914.

GENEVA—League council to meet December 7 or 14 on Madrid government's appeal against aid to Nationalists.

ROME—Italy and Japan expected to sign mutual recognition pact; Chile recognized Ethiopian conquest.

PARIS, Nov. 30.—(UP)—France has decided to align herself solidly with Great Britain against any war aggressor and to back her decision with a $700,000,000 Navy building program.

The government, adopting the new British policy of "preventive warning" to nations that might be tempted to strike, authorized Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos to announce in the chamber of deputies Friday that any aggression against Britain would cause immediate mobilization of the whole of France's land, air and naval strength. The same guarantee will apply to Belgium.

Parliament Assists
France's declaration is to be backed up, it was learned, by the introduction in parliament of a supplementary 15,000,000 franc ($700,000,000) Navy program, on top of the gigantic Navy, Army and Air force expenditures already envisaged.

It was a day for declarations of strength. In Moscow, Russia announced that its total of air force planes had reached 7,000. At Gosslar, in Germany, Hermann Goering, Germany's air minister, announced that Germany was no longer so "weak" as she was in 1914.

Foreign Minister Delbos's statement that France will regard a threat to Britain as a threat to her completes a series of declarations which again align France, Belgium and Britain as they were aligned in August, 1914. Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary, announced in London last week that Britain would aid Belgium in event of an attack and Paul Van Zeeland, Belgian premier and foreign minister, announced in turn that despite her neutrality program—or because of it—Belgium would resist any nation which crossed her frontier.

Alliance With Russia
In France's view, she has been strengthened greatly within the last week. She has her military alliance with Russia. It is understood that Britain has informed Poland, that, in event France and Poland added each other under their military alliance, Britain would not regard their mutual enemy—which would be Germany—as having been attacked illegally. The general staffs of the armies of Roumania and Yugoslavia agreed that if German troops entered Czechoslovakia or to use her soil as a road to Russia, the Germans would find all three armies united against them.

The Roumanian and Yugoslavian armies would march through Hungary.

ANOTHER DRIVERS' TEST
State highway patrolmen will conduct an examination for auto drivers at the city building Tuesday 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. This will be the third test held here. They are conducted the first and third Tuesday of each month.

NORTHWESTERN AREA IN NEED OF HEAVY RAINFALL

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 30.—(UP)—Farmers of the northwest, poverty stricken and forced to rely by prolonged summer drought, faced the additional hardship of meagre winter and spring wheat crops today.

Heavy spring rains, following a normal winter snowfall, will be needed to produce even a fair crop in the most important area of the United States. Sparse autumn rains failed to relieve the parched subsoil in Montana, the Dakotas and parts of Minnesota.

An important grain company reported in its latest survey that fall plowing in spring wheat areas was hindered by dry soil and lack of machinery and manpower.

Clyde Tootle paid a fine of $100 and costs to H. O. Eveland, justice of peace, at noon Monday on a charge of driving when intoxicated. His rights to drive were suspended for six months.

To create a disturbance in a Lancaster pike filling station, and to knock over a mail box with his automobile are bad enough, but to damage the automobile of a deputy sheriff who is assigned to arrest him is too much.

Clyde Tootle, 60, of near Williamsport, is in the county jail after colliding with the county car driven by Deputy Sheriff Robert Armstrong Saturday night. Tootle didn't give him a chance. Armstrong says, even driving his machine without lights.

The deputy charges Tootle with operating an automobile when intoxicated.

Two fenders and a running board on the Ford driven by Armstrong were damaged. The deputy was accompanied by Frank Goff, juvenile officer. Neither was injured.

James Mahoney, 21, of Route 2, Laurelville, is being questioned by the sheriff's department in the investigation of an auto mishap Saturday night on Route 56 near Leislerville.

Officers said a car driven by Mahoney left the highway and a passenger, Mable Bailey, 19, of South Perry, suffered a broken right forearm. Dr. E. R. Austin was called to give first aid and Miss Bailey was removed to Berger hospital for treatment. She was discharged later.

Mahoney appeared at the police department after the accident to inquire where to find the hospital.

Two Others Unhurt
Lerma Azbell, 21, Rockbridge, and Luther Neff, Adelphi, riding in the car, escaped serious injury.

A black and white cab of Chillicothe, driven by Russell R. Rhinehardt, Chillicothe, Route 7, and the auto of Clem Hines, Ashville, R.F.D., were damaged early Sunday in a collision on Route 23 about 14 miles north of Circleville. No one was injured.

A charge of reckless operation against Charles George, Circleville Route 5, was dismissed in police court Monday morning. It was filed by H. P. Rhymer, West Mansfield, and grew out of a traffic accident Nov. 21 at Court and High streets.

NEW CARBURETOR TO PROVIDE 200 MILES A GALLON

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 30—(UP)—A "mystery" carburetor which, its inventor claims, will enable an automobile to travel more than 200 miles on a gallon of gasoline, is being secretly tested here, it became known today.

The inventor is Charles Nelson Pogue, 38, of Winnipeg, Man., and his backers include John E. Hammett, millionaire Canadian mine promoter.

A car equipped with Pogue's carburetor, it was said, is being driven continuously, day and night, over Ontario roads.

NEW NAVY BUILDING PLAN IS DISCLOSED

Many Millions Appropriated for Building as Germany's War Minister Announces Nation Stronger Than in 1914

RUSSIA HAS 7,000 AIRPLANES READY

Belgium, too, Joins Britain in Declaration Of Intent in Case of New European War

BY UNITED PRESS

TODAY'S DEVELOPMENTS IN THE WORLD POLITICAL SITUATION:

MADRID—Loyalists await international and Moorish reinforcements; international division repels two fierce nationalist attacks. PARIS—France to announce close support of Great Britain in any attack and to launch $700,000,000 navy program.

MOSCOW—Assistant aviation chief announced Russia has 7,000 war planes.

BERLIN—Goering announced Germany is not as "weak" as in 1914.

GENEVA—League council to meet December 7 or 14 on Madrid government's appeal against aid to Nationalists.

ROME—Italy and Japan expected to sign mutual recognition pact; Chile recognized Ethiopian conquest.

PARIS, Nov. 30.—(UP)—France has decided to align herself solidly with Great Britain against any war aggressor and to back her decision with a $700,000,000 Navy building program.

The government, adopting the new British policy of "preventive warning" to nations that might be tempted to strike, authorized Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos to announce in the chamber of deputies Friday that any aggression against Britain would cause immediate mobilization of the whole of France's land, air and naval strength. The same guarantee will apply to Belgium.

Parliament Assists

France's declaration is to be backed up, it was learned, by the introduction in parliament of a supplementary 15,000,000 franc ($700,000,000) Navy program, on top of the gigantic Navy, Army and Air force expenditures already envisaged.

It was a day for declarations of strength. In Moscow, Russia announced that its total of air force planes had reached 7,000. At Goslar, in Germany, Hermann Goering, Germany's air minister, announced that Germany was no longer so "weak" as she was in 1914.

Foreign Minister Delbos's statement that France will regard a threat to Britain as a threat to her completes a series of declarations which again align France, Belgium and Britain as they were aligned in August, 1914. Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary, announced in London last week that Britain would aid Belgium in event of an attack and Paul Van Zeeland, Belgian premier and foreign minister, announced in turn that despite her neutrality program—or because of it—Belgium would resist any nation which crossed her frontier.

Alliance With Russia

In France's view, she has been strengthened greatly within the last week. She has her military alliance with Russia. It is understood that Britain has informed Poland, that, in event France and Poland aided each other under their military alliance, Britain would not regard their mutual enemy—which would be Germany—as having been attacked illegally. The general staffs of the armies of Roumania and Yugoslavia agreed that if German troops entered Czechoslovakia or to use her soil as a road to Russia, the Germans would find all three armies united against them.

Another Drivers' Test

State highway patrolmen will conduct an examination for auto drivers at the city building Tuesday 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. This will be the third test held here. They are conducted the first and third Tuesday of each month.

BUENOS AIRES CHEERS F. D. R. ON PEACE TRIP

BUENOS AIRES, Nov. 30 — (UP) — Franklin D. Roosevelt, first president of the United States ever to set foot on Argentine soil, landed in flag-bedecked and festive Buenos Aires today to open the inter-American peace conference which he fathered.

President Augustin P. Justo and his entire cabinet were at the dock and greeted him warmly when he stepped ashore from the American cruiser Indianapolis, which had been escorted into port by a squadron of 15 Argentine warships.

Thousands of spectators had been waiting for hours under a hot summer sun to see Mr. Roosevelt and cheer him wildly in the greatest popular reception the nation ever has accorded a foreigner. Hundreds of thousands more—the police said the number might reach a million—lined the five-mile route from the north basin to the American embassy.

Arrival of the Indianapolis and Mr. Roosevelt was heralded by the shrieking of ship sirens and whistles, and by airplanes roaring overhead.

Mr. Roosevelt came down the gangplank smiling. He shook hands warmly with President Justo and the members of his cabinet.

NORTHWESTERN AREA IN NEED OF HEAVY RAINFALL

MINNEAPOLIS, Nov. 30 — (UP) — Farmers of the northwest, poverty stricken and forced to rely by prolonged summer drought, faced the additional hardship of meagre winter and spring wheat crops today.

Heavy spring rains, following a normal winter snowfall, will be needed to produce even a fair crop in the most important area of the United States. Sparse autumn rains failed to relieve the parched subsoil in Montana, the Dakotas and parts of Minnesota.

An important grain company reported in its latest survey that fall plowing in spring wheat areas was hindered by dry soil and lack of machinery and manpower.

H. L. Sams, Superintendent of the Williamsport school, was elected Saturday as president of the Western Ohio School Superintendents' Round Table.

The election took place at the concluding session of the two-day semi-annual convention held in Dayton.

Other officers named are Earl A. Rice of Bellbrook, chairman of the executive committee; A. E. Gower of Greenville, member of the executive committee, and W. J. Holt of Hillsboro, secretary.

Miller Present, too
Superintendent Sams and Principal George Miller, also of Williamsport, attended the sessions. Mr. Sams succeeds L. S. Rhoades of Norwood as president.

Sixty-odd questions were discussed informally by the school administrators during the two-day meeting. All were answered pro and con.

Included in the list were: What is a general education? Is the high birthrate of ignorance outrunning the propagation of intelligence? Are we making too much ado over McGuffey and his readers? Should we taxpayers of the state allow public funds to go to the support of private schools? Can we conscientiously encourage the practice of no home study? Should a history teacher be permitted to teach disbelief in God in interpreting world history? Do moving pictures and radio help or hinder a child in securing a basic education? Should pupils who are mentally unable to profit substantially by further instruction be excluded from our public schools? Does a policy of no tuition save or waste taxpayers' money?

Spread of Tuberculosis and How to Control It

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
WHEN PEOPLE ask me whether I believe in state medicine or not, I usually dodge the issue. For most purposes, I think state medicine would be dreadful. But in the case of tuberculosis I believe that if wide powers were given the government to control it, it would become as rare as typhoid fever today.

This is true for two reasons. First, because tuberculosis control of any community infringes considerably on the personal liberty of every member. And, second, because proper treatment of individual cases is usually beyond the financial means of those who acquire it. These reasons make it a better state-managed than private practice-managed disease.

The spread of tuberculosis is almost entirely due to the carrier who does not know that he has the disease. The modern watchword of the tuberculosis worker when he finds one case is, "Where is the other case?" To show how common it is to have an active case which is either unsuspected or uncontrolled, the figures from New York show that of 5,000 cases only 24 per cent were reported a year or more before death; 44 per cent were not reported until after death; 31 per cent were reported less than a year before death. Such cases must have been spraying tuberculosis germs and exposing friends and families for years before.

Control of the disease would involve the examination and weeding out of every case. This does, admittedly, involve personal liberty, but it is worth it, as shown in the experiment at Framingham, Massachusetts. This community started in 1916 to make a community study. At the end of the seven-year demonstration the death rate had dropped to 33 per 100,000 population, from 121 during the pre-demonstration decade.

After the case is found, the least that should be expected is that the patient would be instructed how to prevent giving the disease to others. In a survey conducted in 1929, among 1,500 tuberculosis patients, it was found that 47 per cent had not been told by their physicians to use only their own dishes; 42 per cent had not been told how to dispose of sputum; 57 per cent were not instructed to sleep alone. Under the best circumstances the open case should be put immediately in a sanatorium.

These two measures require a good deal of work and eternal vigilance. They are worth it, because they carry the possibility of wiping one of the oldest and most relentless of man's enemies off the face of the earth.

For Digestion's Sake ... Smoke Camels

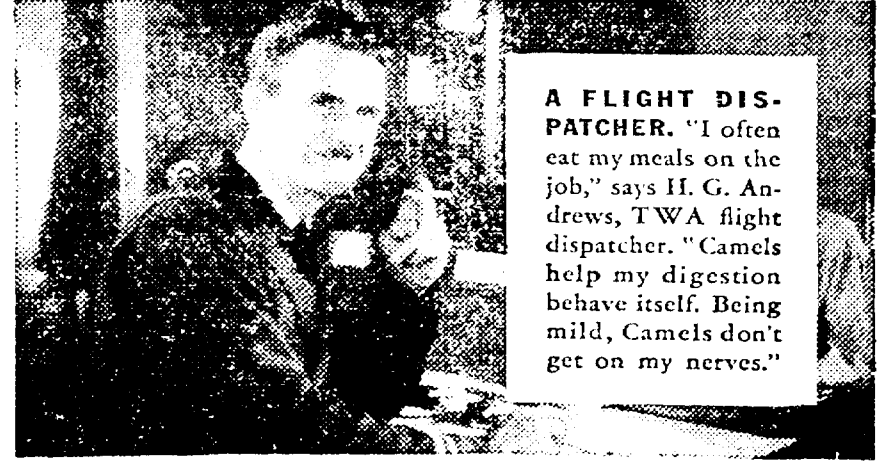

Good digestion helps bring a sense of well-being and contentment

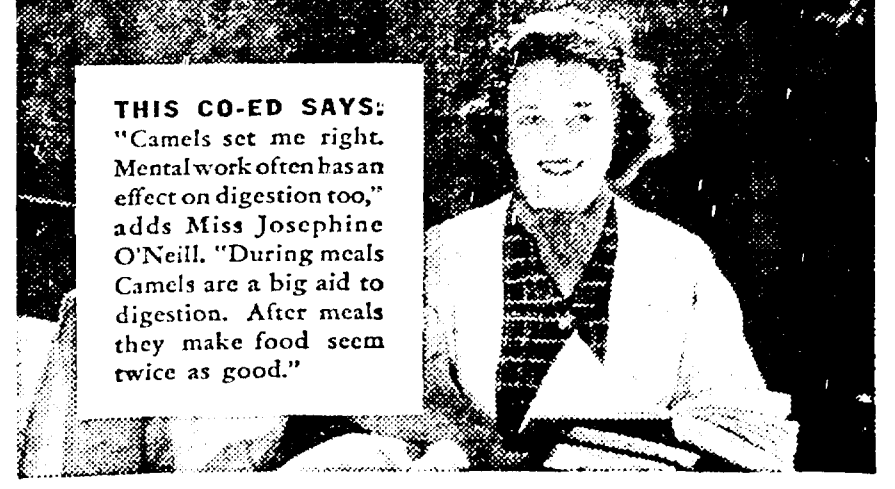

THE delightful effect of smoking Camels with your meals and afterwards has been proved again and again in the great laboratory of human experience. Explorers, champion athletes, people in hazardous outdoor work, as well as millions of men and women in homes and offices, find that Camels get digestion off to a good start and make the perfect ending to a meal. When you enjoy Camels, you are rewarded with an increased flow of digestive fluids—alkaline digestive fluids—so important to good digestion. And you can enjoy Camels as often as you like! Camels don't get on your nerves.

Deep in the jungle fastness of Central America amid the ruins of a lost city...
Lawrence T. K. Griswold (right) has headed expeditions to Tibet, Komodo, the Amazon, and the lost cities of the ancient Mayas. He lists Camels as one of the necessities on the trail. "At best, eating in the jungle is no picnic," says Griswold. "I've found that smoking Camels is an aid to my digestion. Camels ease tension and give me a 'lift' in energy when I need it most. They never get on my nerves."

A FLIGHT DISPATCHER. "I often eat my meals on the job," says H. G. Andrews, TWA flight dispatcher. "Camels help my digestion behave itself. Being mild, Camels don't get on my nerves."

THIS CO-ED SAYS: "Camels set me right. Mental work often has an effect on digestion too," adds Miss Josephine O'Neill. "During meals Camels are a big aid to digestion. After meals they make food seem twice as good."

For Digestion's Sake ... Smoke Camels

Good digestion helps bring a sense of well-being and contentment

THE delightful effect of smoking Camels with your meals and afterwards has been proved again and again in the great laboratory of human experience. Explorers, champion athletes, people in hazardous outdoor work, as well as millions of men and women in homes and offices, find that Camels get digestion off to a good start and make the perfect ending to a meal. When you enjoy Camels, you are rewarded with an increased flow of digestive fluids — alkaline digestive fluids — so important to good digestion. And you can enjoy Camels as often as you like! Camels don't get on your nerves.

Deep in the jungle fastness of Central America amid the ruins of a lost city... Lawrence T. K. Griswold (right) has headed expeditions to Tibet, Komodo, the Amazon, and the lost cities of the ancient Mayas. He lists Camels as one of the necessities on the trail. "At best, eating in the jungle is no picnic," says Griswold. "I've found that smoking Camels is an aid to my digestion. Camels ease tension and give me a 'lift' in energy when I need it most. They never get on my nerves."

A FLIGHT DISPATCHER. "I often eat my meals on the job," says H. G. Andrews, TWA flight dispatcher. "Camels help my digestion behave itself. Being mild, Camels don't get on my nerves."

THIS CO-ED SAYS: "Camels set me right. Mental work often has an effect on digestion too," adds Miss Josephine O'Neill. "During meals Camels are a big aid to digestion. After meals they make food seem twice as good."

COSTLIER TOBACCOS

Camels are made from finer, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS—Turkish and Domestic—than any other popular brand

PRESIDENT NOT TO SEEK THIRD TERM IN OFFICE

Creel, Member of Wilson Cabinet, Declares F.D. Has Stated Policy

TO RETIRE IN 1941

Abolition of Child Labor, Sweatshops Objectives

NEW YORK, Nov. 20 — Fears that the idea of a third term has taken fixed shape in President Roosevelt's mind are definitely set at rest in an authoritative article on the President's plans and purposes written by George Creel for a forthcoming issue of Collier's. He quotes Mr. Roosevelt himself as saying:

"On January 21, 1941, when a new President takes over, I will be in Hyde Park having the time of my life."

Creel, who worked side by side with Mr. Roosevelt when both were members of Woodrow Wilson's official family, twice before has been privileged to announce the policies which would determine the present Administration's plans. On March 3, 1933, he set forth exactly the broad outlines of the original New Deal laws, and in September, 1935, he foretold the laws enacted during the past session of Congress.

Plans and Purposes

In the present article Creel has had the opportunity to state the plans and purposes which animate the President as he faces his second term, particularly regarding the Supreme Court, future social legislation, undistributed profits and possible corrective amendments to measures passed during the last term. He also tells of the President's own reaction to the bitter criticism of his famous "master" speech of the recent campaign, in which he felt that his phrase "these forces met their master" was unfairly twisted to imply a threat of dictatorship.

Creel states that the President's hope "is the establishment of a new social order that will retain every value of the old but at the same time will take courageous cognizance of the vast changes and the imperative needs evolved by these changes." The President "holds to his faith in NRA fundamentals," Creel says, and adds that "the abolition of child labor and sweatshops, together with establishment of standards for minimum wages and maximum hours are still Roosevelt objectives."

In Mystery Slashing

ALTHOUGH conflicting versions were given regarding the injury, Hollywood police recorded the slashed wrist sustained by Ian Keith, screen actor, as accidental. Keith's wife, the former Mrs. Hildegarde Pabst Smith, said Keith slipped while shaving and cut himself on a broken bottle. Police officers earlier quoted Mrs. Keith as saying her husband told her just before the incident that "Tomorrow is Thanksgiving. You don't love me any more and what have I to be thankful for." Keith was reported in serious condition.

CCC CAMPS FOR GIRLS STARTED IN 50 CENTERS

5,000 Needy to be Placed on Work-Relief Program in Seven States

LASTING BENEFITS SEEN

Each to be Taught Tasks Under U. S. Supervision

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—(UP)—Establishment of 50 feminine CCC camps to provide jobs and vocational training for 5,000 needy girls has been approved as a regular part of the government's work-relief program, officials said today.

Immediate plans call for setting up work centers under the Works Progress Administration in Rhode Island, Arkansas, Florida, Oklahoma, Missouri, South Dakota and Tennessee.

Director Richard R. Brown said sites already had been selected in most instances in abandoned CCC barracks, vacant resorts, school buildings or other quarters WPA can secure free of charge.

Enrollees interviewed The government also is interviewing enrollees for the camps now paying special attention to "those who give promise of profiting by the experience of camp life and who will be able to carry some of the benefits back into their community lives."

"The purpose of these camps," Brown explained, "is to give to young women who have been handicapped by poverty and unemployment a new outlook through work, education and healthful, outdoor living in an environment which will stimulate their qualities of cooperation and leadership."

The decision to establish the camp program came after definite success of seven experimental centers in South Carolina, Kansas, Illinois, Minnesota, Idaho and New Mexico.

The girls will stay in the new camps for three or four month periods, receiving $5 cash a month from the government in addition to their subsistence and clothes. Each girl will cost about $39 a month including all expenses.

Each girl will be required to perform a certain amount of work each day, with the tasks stressing domestic science and handicraft such as making hospital supplies, historical highway markers and repairing toys.

Increase in Income Provides
Residents Opportunity

During 1936, there has been more remodeling, painting, and building of farm homes in Ohio and more equipping them with water systems and bathroom equipment than for the whole 1930-35 period.

This is the estimate made by Miss Theima Beall, home management specialist, Ohio State University, in a recent outlook report on farm family living. She anticipates that such home improvements will continue if the rise in the incomes of Ohio farmers is maintained or continued. Their gross income has nearly doubled since 1932; but of course, their expenses have also been greater, although not increasing in proportion to income.

New Electricity Customers
Miss Beall estimates further that during 1936 there will have been added as new customers for electric service, from private utilities alone, between 9 and 10 thousand Ohio farm families. In addition, she discloses that approximately 1,200 new farm family customers have been added this year as customers to municipal plants, through the cooperation of the Rural Electrification Administration. She says a considerable number of additional farm families are looking forward to having their first electric service in 1937.

Although farm income has been increasing, the home management specialist says that a study of the farm family expenditure records for a number of farm families in 1935, emphasizes that careful thought must be given to the use of funds spent for family living.

For instance, she says it appears that unless certain foods are home-produced, many families have an inadequate diet, from the nutritional standpoint. She has observed this to be especially true with dairy products, fruits and vegetables.

"While it may be true that, through the production of foods for home consumption, the amount of cash saved for other uses is small compared to the total farm labor income," Miss Beall says, "still it is likewise true that an all too common practice seems to be to do without such foods unless they are produced at home."

DARBY SCHOOL OPENS MONDAY AS SCARE ENDS

Darby township school, closed a week ago because of a scarlet fever scare, was reopened Monday. The closing order was issued by Dr. V. D. Kerns after a pupil became ill in school and was taken home in a bus. No additional cases have been reported.

Dr. Tippet held his audience in rapt attention throughout and showed a deep sympathy for the youth of today as well as an unusual understanding of their perplexities. At no time did he express concern over the morals of the young people and many times expressed his belief that they are no worse than were their fathers and mothers. He talked on the Realism movement in the United States which started when he was a reporter on a large New York newspaper. He pointed out three points of conflict for his group to face tomorrow. Briefly expressed they are Reality of Actuality; of Possibility and Reality of Spirituality. While Dr. Tippet does not favor the Pollyanna type of youth, he does not agree with the Realists of today that every thing real is ugly.

He expressed to his auditors that they are the leaders in their respective groups and are therefore in the minority. His illustrations were timely and numerous and gladly would his audience have listened much longer.

IMPROVEMENTS TO CONTINUE IN FARM PROPERTY

ELECTRIC SERVICE ASSISTS

Increase in Income Provides
Residents Opportunity

During 1936, there has been more remodeling, painting, and building of farm homes in Ohio and more equipping them with water systems and bathroom equipment than for the whole 1935-36 period.

This is the estimate made by Miss Thelma Beall, home management specialist, Ohio State University, in a recent outlook report on farm family living. She anticipates that such home improvements will continue if the rise in the incomes of Ohio farmers is maintained or continued. Their gross income has nearly doubled since 1932; but of course, their expenses have also been greater, although not increasing in proportion to income.

New Electricity Customers
Miss Beall estimates further that during 1936 there will have been added as new customers for electric service, from private utilities alone, between 9 and 10 thousand Ohio farm families. In addition, she discloses that approximately 1,200 new farm family customers have been added this year as customers to municipal plants, through the cooperation of the Rural Electrification Administration. She says a considerable number of additional farm families are looking forward to having their first electric service in 1937.

Although farm income has been increasing, the home management specialist says that a study of the farm family expenditure records for a number of farm families in 1935, emphasizes that careful thought must be given to the use of funds spent for family living.

For instance, she says it appears that unless certain foods are home-produced, many families have an inadequate diet, from the nutritional standpoint. She has observed this to be especially true with dairy products, fruits and vegetables.

"While it may be true that, through the production of foods for home consumption, the amount of cash saved for other uses is small compared to the total farm labor income," Miss Beall says, "still it is likewise true that an all too common practice seems to be to do without such foods unless they are produced at home."

Congressman Must Serve Term

HERE are Bertillon photos of Congressman John H. Hoeppel, of California, right, and his son, Charles Jerome Hoeppel, left, who were apprehended several weeks ago at Richmond, Va. Hoeppel and his son, accused of soliciting money for influence exerted in procuring an appointment to the U. S. Military academy at West Point, disappeared from California after the U. S. supreme court upheld their conviction. Hoeppel and his son must spend from four months to a year in prison.

Mrs. Ors Jones had as her dinner guests on Thanksgiving Mr. and Mrs. Howard Whitaker, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Pope, of Chillicothe.

Mr. and Mrs. James Shanton spent Thursday with Mr. and Mrs. Fred Henson at Frankfort.

Schools here recessed Wednesday and will reconvene Monday. In the mean time plans for removing to the new building are made and the classes will meet in new quarters Monday.

Fred Shepherd, Rocky River and Howard Eisenbrey, Parma are guests of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Taylor for a few days.

Arthur Gallagher, Yellowbud

met with a serious injury Wednesday when the Ford Tudor in which he was traveling was upset near the home of Harvey Morrison. The injured man was brought to the office of Dr. E. D. Engleman and later was taken to the Chillicothe Hospital for an x-ray examination. A fracture of the fore arm was disclosed and Dr. Engleman reduced the fracture. Fresh dirt was the cause of the accident.

The Clarksburg Epworth League entertained the other leagues of the county at the annual Booth Festival and Rally Friday evening at the Community House.

Seven leagues displayed booths and won Achievement Cards, Trinity league won first place and Bainbridge and Clarksburg tied for second place. The judges were Mrs. Alfred Havighurst, Cleveland, Dr. Earl Hedrick, Bainbridge and Supt. P. B. Timmons. Booths were also built by Bethel, Dry Run, Frankfort and Walnut Street. The value of all donations was $435.03. Trinity's alone being worth $121.

The ladies Aid Society served a lunch to more than two hundred prior to the program.

John Sigler, Chillicothe accordionist who recently appeared on Major Bowes Amateur Hour favored with several selections and a Community sing led by Mary Gladys Smith, Frankfort and Catherine Collins, Chillicothe preceded the program proper.

Rev. Paul Neiswander, Kingston, was Toastmaster and presented the following program: Hymn, Give of Your Best to the Master; Scripture Lesson, Kathleen Rhoades, Bainbridge; Invocation, Rev. J. T. Yocum, Bourneville; vocal duet, Ann and Ralph Haney, Trinity; Trumpet solo, Beulah Huff, Walnut Street; Address, Rev. Donald Tippet, pastor Beasley M. E. Church; vocal trio, Willette and Leland Price, and Norma Jean Anderson, Frankfort; playlet, Balancing the Budget, Ellene Streitenberger and Raymond McNeal, Bethel; Awarding of banners, Rev. Neiswander; Awarding of Achievement cards, Catherine Collins; hymn, Are Ye Able; Benediction; Closing hymn, Into My Heart.

Officers for the coming year were elected as follows: president,

Catherine Collins; first vice president, James Watson, Trinity; fourth vice president, Mary Gladys Smith; secretary-treasurer, Carl Reisinger, Clarksburg; chorister, Leland Price, Frankfort; Pianist, Grace Bowdie, Dry Run; reporters, Ruth Milligan and Ardith Pyle, Trinity; Counselor, Rev. G. C. Reed, Clarksburg.

Dr. Tippet held his audience in rapt attention throughout and showed a deep sympathy for the youth of today as well as an unusual understanding of their perplexities. At no time did he express concern over the morals of the young people and many times expressed his belief that they are no worse than were their fathers and mothers. He talked on the Realism movement in the United States which started when he was a reporter on a large New York newspaper. He pointed out three points of conflict for his group to face tomorrow. Briefly expressed they are Reality of Actuality; of Possibility and Reality of Spirituality. While Dr. Tippet does not favor the Pollyanna type of youth, he does not agree with the Realists of today that everything real is ugly.

He expressed to his auditors that they are the leaders in their respective groups and are therefore in the minority. His illustrations were timely and numerous and gladly would his audience have listened much longer.

A small tenant house on the Bank's farm on the Austin pike was completely destroyed by fire

Saturday about six o'clock a. m.

Mr. and Mrs. George McCallister and two children reside in it. They had arisen and replenished the fire and soon discovered the roof in flames. The fire had gained such headway that the efforts of neighbors were directed to removing part of the household furnishings. Building and contents are a total loss.

AN EDISON NEEDED

THERE is apparently no end to the subjects which may be investigated with benefit to humanity. Research in biology, chemistry, psychology and allied sciences is no longer surprising. The results are often amazing and recently marvelous and practical results have been obtained, but research in itself as an activity and urge seems in no wise startling. The public is more likely to be astonished by scientific examination of some of the common, everyday things which it accepts as blessings or otherwise.

One of the latter is glare from automobile headlights. Some manufacturers of lamps have tried various devices for filtering the light through dark glass, for shading the bulb, and for directing the rays downward, but so far as is known, none of these has been scientifically tested and found satisfactory and their production has been relatively haphazard.

The search for the non-glaring headlight and the 100 per cent efficient glare-eliminating windshield must go on. The reward for the discovery will be fewer traffic accidents, thousands of lives saved annually and faster and more comfortable night driving.

While manufacturers, scientists and inventors are on this quest let them also look for a fog-piercing automobile light, a traffic light that will actually expedite traffic, an automobile horn that warns without wrecking heart and nerves and a fuel for motor that will make motoring more a pleasure than an expense.

FOOTBALL'S BIG YEAR

IT is not unlikely that the final tabulation of attendance at football games this season will prove this to be the biggest year the game has seen, in respect to public interest and gate receipts.

Rumors have been heard already of the so-called "overemphasis" which gave the game a bad name some seasons ago. There will be charges made, undoubtedly, that certain institutions of learning have overstepped the sidelines of academic propriety to secure winning teams and the gate receipts which follow them.

But it is easily evident that the public puts the real pressure on the schools by regarding a football game as Autumn's finest spectacle and paying handsomely to see one. Not for the game's sake alone, of course, but for all the glamor and excitement surrounding collegiate football, the loud-spoken loyalties of alumni, the social incidentals, the typically American insistence on joining the crowd and sharing its enthusiasms.

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE . . Hour by Hour

PAGES from the Diary of an Antiquated Reporter:

It was mid-afternoon in Cincinnati and eight floors up from the street everything was calm. Webb Miller's "I Found No Peace" was receiving the interested attention it merits. Far below sirens shrieked and bells clanged in mounting uproar. An interesting sight, racing fire apparatus and attendant smoke eaters in action. A few minutes at the window and then back to the book. More bells, more sirens, the muffled sound of thousands of grouped men and women. Once more to the window to learn that the fire was close enough to be seen without too much travel, so donned hat and coat, turned out the lights and opened the door. But only for a moment. Smoke billowed into the room.

Back to the window. Aerial towers and fire ladders that only a few minutes before had appeared gigantic had shrunk out of all reason. What puny things they appeared! From that height one wouldn't bounce at all; just splatter. The Hotel Gibson was on fire! And the firemen less than an hour before bemoaning the entire lack of excitement in an early winter vacation. Muskies and big pike in Northern Michigan had provided the thrills for many years. Yet they were far outdone now, even for a confirmed fisherman. Maybe the fire was above, maybe below. Probably below, for the eighth floor was deathlike in its silence.

Something had to be done, so taking my heart fully in my back teeth the door was again opened and carefully looked after some reason not easily explained and then away in search of the elevators, which could not be found, for the smoke was so thick lights could not be seen more than a foot or two away. A year or two groping about the stifling hallways and then appeared an angel. Not really an angel, just a waiter who had served me at noon in the rathskeller and I greeted him like a long lost umpty-something classmate out of Purdue. He escorted me fifteen feet to a service elevator and said: "Lean on that bell, mister, and get out of here quick." As though I needed instruction in such elementary procedure at my age.

The elevator arrived long after

HEADLINE BRAIN TRUST GONE

WASHINGTON — For those who would be an adviser to the President there is a moral to be drawn from the recent resignation of Rexford Guy Tugwell.

That moral is: Keep out of the headlines. All of the Roosevelt Brain Trusters who made headlines now are out. On the other hand, some of the originals still are operating—but under cover. Reason: They never made the headlines.

Most famous Brain Trusters were Professor Raymond Moley, James Warburg and Professor Tugwell. Moley was the most spectacular. He liked to stage sudden airplane flights and make surprise visits to the yacht Amberjack. He was here, there and everywhere. He lived for the spotlight. He was the first to go.

As Assistant Secretary of State he lasted only six months. Tugwell was very much the opposite. He did not like the limelight, but natural events forced him into it. He had ideas. He was active. He was a unique personality. Under these circumstances, the spotlight was unavoidable—much as he hated it.

Also, some of his friends were not overly discreet. Mrs. Henry Wallace, officiating at a chrysanthemum show, saw a gorgeous flower made by crossing "General Pershing" with "John Balmer" and named it "Rexford Guy Tugwell". He will never live that down.

History, however, will give Tugwell a much higher place in the New Deal than his critics do now. But the spotlight was his undoing.

BACKGROUND BRAIN TRUSTERS

On the other hand, the man Tugwell is now working for, Charles Taussig, president of the American Molasses Company, also is an original Brain Truster. But he remains in the background. No one ever hears about him, yet he has helped inspire some of the most important projects in the New Deal—the Youth Administration, regulation of the stock market, many others.

Another background Brain Truster is Adolf Berle, City Chamberlain of New York, and attorney for Taussig. (Taussig, Tugwell and Berle now will be grouped together in one firm.)

Berle commutes back and forth between Washington and New York—usually in upper berths—assists in the writing of some of the President's most important speeches, puts his finger in all sorts of New Deal pies, yet never gets in the headlines.

Another important background is Judge Sam Rosenman of the New York Supreme Court, also an original Brain Truster. Able, liberal and kindly, he never appears in the open. But during the crucial stages of the recent campaign, it was Rosenman who lived at the White House, traveled with the President on the Campaign Special.

But probably the two most important Brain Trusters the President now has never get into print at all. They are Tom Corcoran, counsel of the RFC, and Ben Cohen, PWA attorney. One an Irishman, the other a Jew, they work together as a perfect team.

I had started giving consideration to an adjacent flight of stairs. "Where is the fire?" I asked. "Eleventh!" was the reply as the operator brought the car up with a bang at the main floor. I thought the cables had burned in two. Gasping with relief I made for the door and almost reached it before being engulfed in a swarm of grim-faced firemen. An officer in a white coat shouted "Eleventh!" and we shot upward. When we returned to the main floor once more the fireman doesn't live who could have entered that car before I jumped out.

And right into the kitchen. First time in a big hotel kitchen and a most interesting sight it is. So I had to ask directions twice before finding the entrance to the dining room. Then the lobby, where everything was calm, only a few realizing that the hotel was afire. Business as usual, and it kept right on the rest of the afternoon.

Here comes a reporter and there goes a photographer. A veritable parade of news hounds. A big story breaking and me on vacation. I just sat there in an easy chair and watched it all.

The BLOODHOUNDS BAY

By WALTER S. MASTERMAN

Copyright, released by CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

READ THIS FIRST:

Jack Reid, who has just witnessed the mysterious murder of Sir Henry Severing in the chapel of his ancient abbey, is a new-do-well who has lived by his wits since he left an orphanage. In the chapel to steal a valuable jeweled cross, Reid could not identify Sir Henry's slayer and could raise no alarm for fear of incriminating himself. Next day Reid, who has been posing as an itinerant painter working at the abbey, Colonel Graham, a neighbor, and Eric Colindale, agent of the estate who is in love with Lady Severing, trace the missing Sir Henry to the chapel door by means of bloodhounds. The bloodhounds trace Sir Henry's scent to the coffin of his father in the crypt beneath the abbey chapel. Then Colonel Graham, owner of the bloodhounds, announces he will call in Scotland Yard. At the yard, the colonel obtains the services of a young detective, Richard Selden, and at the abbey, Colonel Graham, Selden and Hutchins, the local police official, go into the crypt and find Sir Henry's body in the coffin of his father. He had been stabbed to death. An urn, containing the ashes of Sir Henry's father, is also in the coffin where it had been placed at his death.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER 10

THE SNUB annoyed the Colonel when the detective said he would prefer to stay at the local inn with Inspector Hutchins. It was telling him plainly that Selden would not have the distinction drawn between himself and the inspector, and the latter registered a good mark to the detective for the courtesy.

"If you will kindly tell the constable to come here, we can send for the people we require in turn," Selden said as the other two went out.

"Darned young prig! I'll tell Boyle to send me someone with more experience and less conceit," Graham said, as he and Colindale walked along the corridor.

Directly the door was shut, Selden took a seat and motioned Hutchins to do the same. "Look here, Inspector, I want to get this straight. I know you feel resentment at my being here. I'm only acting under orders; and we will work this thing together. You have vastly more experience than I have, and that will count; also, you have local knowledge. Shall we agree to do that?"

The frank, boyish smile disarmed the older man.

"Certainly," he was almost going to say 'sir', but felt that once that word were used their positions would be no longer on an equality.

"Good. Colonel Graham has interfered in this matter and we have to do the best we can. It's a pity in some ways he used his nouns."

"But," Hutchins retorted, "if he hadn't we should never have found the body."

"Exactly," Selden looked at the other with a queer expression. "Perhaps it would have been better if we had not seen now the murderer will be thoroughly warned and on his guard. If the disappearance had remained a mystery he might have disclosed himself."

"I don't follow you there."

"My dear fellow," Selden said with a note of impatience, "there is no question of robbery here; we can rule that out. There is also no question of this sudden murder, for the preparations must have been made already before the man was induced to go to the chapel. We have to delve into the whole circumstances, and into the past as well. Remember, there is no heir; the baronetcy terminates with Sir Henry's death. Graham told me that. We'll go into all that later. Before we call these people up I want to show you something. Selden went to the desk and took a piece of paper, on which he rapidly sketched an outline of the Abbey, leaving the details to be filled in. He turned it over as a knock came at the door, and the village constable entered.

"Will you ask him to fetch Colindale," Selden whispered, and the inspector gave him a grateful look.

Eric Colindale came in, evidently in a sulky mood. Selden summed him up at a glance; he was ruffled and antagonistic.

"I'm so sorry," the detective said at once. "All these precautions were really unnecessary and you should have been able to go out; but I did not wish to annoy the Colonel by saying so. We shan't keep you longer than necessary." He turned the paper, "I wonder whether you could help us with this sketch—it's just a ground floor plan." Selden watched the other keenly without appearing to do so, and saw a look of relief come to his face. He had expected an immediate and searching examination.

"With pleasure," he said at once, and took the paper. "Here is the gateway entrance that is part of the old monastery, in the center of the west side. The corridor once formed the cloisters, now bricked in—you can see the old pillars and arches in the brickwork. All this side has been rebuilt and contains the modern rooms, though even this is old as buildings go. Along the north side is the old refectory of the monks, a fine arched hall, with a lectern let into the wall for the 'reader'. It is never used now except on state occasions such as weddings and funerals. I believe about a century ago there used to be dances and many festivities, but now—"

"Sir Henry was more or less of a recluse, wasn't he?" "In his latter years, yes. He suffered from gout, and a sort of melancholia, and hardly ever went out."

Hutchins was going to put a question, but felt a touch on his foot from Selden and refrained.

"That makes up most of the north side," Colindale went on, sketching the details in with a skilful hand, and writing in the names of the various rooms. "On the east are the servants' quarters, a regular rabbit warren, for it used to be the dwelling-place of the monks, and there are bake-houses and still-rooms and all the paraphernalia of an old country place that held great stores of food. . . . I can't give you all the details—perhaps James could. He's the butler and lives there." The note of contempt did not escape Selden.

"That doesn't matter," Selden assured him.

"Then on the south side is the chapel and the ante-chapel, and the great library, which is seldom used now. That completes the quadrangle. The central court you have seen."

"Thank you. That will be of great assistance to us," Selden said, taking the paper. "You've been here some time?"

"Six years. I was out of a job. After Oxford I tried my hand as an architect and then did a bit of farming. I saw this post was going and applied for it."

"I suppose you can't throw any light on this affair?" Selden asked almost indifferently, as though he scarcely expected an answer.

"It's a complete mystery to me. I haven't seen Sir Henry since I last received my salary, over a week ago, and last night I slept like a top after a hard day on the estate. The first thing I knew was when James came to tell Lady Severing that Sir Henry was missing."

"That would be . . ." Selden inquired softly, with half-closed eyes.

"In her sitting room; I had to discuss certain matters with her," Colindale retorted shortly, as though in challenge.

"Thank you. I really don't think we need detain you, unless the inspector wants to ask you anything." Again the pressure on his foot warned Hutchins to answer in the negative.

"Oh, by the way," Selden asked as Colindale rose, "that butler—has he been here long?"

The stiff, guarded manner dropped from the agent—he was easy and fluent. "I don't know how long he's been in this job, but I believe he was with Sir Henry for many years before he came here. He was his batman, and afterwards wandered all over the place with him as valet. As a matter of fact, I understand that Sir Henry, when young, was a bit of a rip. There are all sorts of strange stories about his doings, but I can't vouch for their truth. All I know is that the place was going to ruin and the old man, his father, had a great difficulty in keeping it up. Everyone said it was because he had to pay off his son's debts and keep him out of England. The usual sort of story; but they had a shock."

"Really, this is most interesting," Selden said pleasantly.

"Sir Henry was summoned back as his father was dying, and arrived here just in time. He brought James with him. But the peculiar part of the whole story was that when the old baronet was dead he left hardly anything—what with taxes and losses he was very badly off. That was all shown clearly by the lawyer. He had not given a penny-piece to his son, Henry. But when Henry became Sir Henry he was in ample funds, paid the death duties, had the whole place done up, and the estate laid out anew, and started off as a big county magnate."

"And then he married?" Selden asked casually.

"And then as you say, he married," Colindale said, and his mouth set in a firm line.

"He changed completely—gave up everything and shut himself up in this room for the most part."

"Of course, in this case," Colindale said thoughtfully, "there may have been a reason. He was nearly killed once."

"An accident?"

"No."

All of the Roosevelt Brain Trusters who made headlines now are out. On the other hand, some of the originals still are operating—but under cover. Reason: They never made the headlines.
Most famous Brain Trusters were Professor Raymond Moley, James Warburg and Professor Tugwell. Moley was the most spectacular. He liked to stage sudden airplane flights and make surprise visits to the yacht Amberjack. He was here, there and everywhere. He lived for the spotlight. He was the first to go.
As Assistant Secretary of State he lasted only six months.
Tugwell was very much the opposite. He did not like the limelight, but natural events forced him into it. He had ideas. He was active. He was a unique personality. Under these circumstances, the spotlight was unavoidable—much as he hated it.
Also, some of his friends were not overly discreet. Mrs. Henry Wallace, officiating at a chrysanthemum show, saw a gorgeous flower made by crossing "General Pershing" with "John Balmer" and named it "Rexford Guy Tugwell". He will never live that down.
History, however, will give Tugwell a much higher place in the New Deal than his critics do now. But the spotlight was his undoing.

AN EDISON NEEDED
THERE is apparently no end to the subjects which may be investigated with benefit to humanity. Research in biology, chemistry, psychology and allied sciences is no longer surprising. The results are often amazing and recently marvelous and practical results have been obtained, but research in itself as an activity and urge seems in no wise startling. The public is more likely to be astonished by scientific examination of some of the common, everyday things which it accepts as blessings or otherwise.
One of the latter is glare from automobile headlights. Some manufacturers of lamps have tried various devices for filtering the light through dark glass, for shading the bulb, and for directing the rays downward, but so far as is known, none of these has been scientifically tested and found satisfactory and their production has been relatively haphazard.
The search for the non-glaring headlight and the 100 per cent efficient glare-eliminating windshield must go on. The reward for the discovery will be fewer traffic accidents, thousands of lives saved annually and faster and more comfortable night driving.
While manufacturers, scientists and inventors are on this quest let them also look for a fog-piercing automobile light, a traffic light that will actually expedite traffic, an automobile horn that warns without wrecking heart and nerves and a fuel for motor that will make motoring more a pleasure than an expense.

FOOTBALL'S BIG YEAR
IT is not unlikely that the final tabulation of attendance at football games this season will prove this to be the biggest year the game has seen, in respect to public interest and gate receipts.
Rumors have been heard already of the so-called "overemphasis" which gave the game a bad name some seasons ago. There will be charges made, undoubtedly, that certain institutions of learning have overstepped the sidelines of academic propriety to secure winning teams and the gate receipts which follow them.
But it is easily evident that the public puts the real pressure on the schools by regarding a football game as Autumn's finest spectacle and paying handsomely to see one. Not for the game's sake alone, of course, but for all the glamor and excitement surrounding collegiate football, the loud-spoken loyalties of alumni, the social incidentals, the typically American insistence on joining the crowd and sharing its enthusiasms.

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE . . Hour by Hour

PAGES from the Diary of an Antiquated Reporter:
It was mid-afternoon in Cincinnati and eight floors up from the street everything was calm. Webb Miller's "I Found No Peace" was receiving the interested attention it merits. Far below sirens shrieked and bells clanged in mounting uproar. An interesting sight, racing fire apparatus and attendant smoke eaters in action. A few minutes at the window and then back to the book. More bells, more sirens, the muffled sound of thousands of grouped men and women. Once more to the window to learn that the fire was close enough to be seen without too much travel, so donned hat and coat, turned out the lights and opened the door. But only for a moment. Smoke billowed into the room.
Back to the window. Aerial towers and fire ladders that only a few minutes before had appeared gigantic had shrunk out of all reason. What puny things they appeared! From that height one wouldn't bounce at all; just splatter. The Hotel Gibson was on fire! And the scrivener less than an hour before hemoaring the entire lack of excitement in an early Winter vacation. Muskies and big pike in Northern Michigan had provided the thrills for many years. Yet they were far outdone now, even for a confirmed fisherman. Maybe the fire was above, maybe below. Probably below, for the eighth floor was deathlike in its silence.

Something had to be done, so taking my heart firmly in my back teeth the door was again opened and carefully looked (for some reason not easily explained) and then away in search of the elevators, which could not be found, for the smoke was so thick lights could not be seen more than a foot or two away. A year or two groping about the stifling hallways and then appeared an angel. Not really an angel, just a waiter who had served me at noon in the rathskeller and I greeted him like a long lost umpty-something classmate out of Purdue. He escorted me fifteen feet to a service elevator and said: "Lean on that bell, mister, and get out of here quick." As though I needed instruction in such elementary procedure at my age.
The elevator arrived long after I had started giving consideration to an adjacent flight of stairs. "Where is the fire?" I asked. "Eleventh!" was the reply as the operator brought the car up with a bang at the main floor. I thought the cables had burned in two. Gasping with relief I made for the door and almost reached it before being engulfed in a swarm of grim-faced firemen. An officer in a white coat shouted "Eleventh" and we shot upward. When we returned to the main floor once more the fireman doesn't live who could have entered that car before I jumped out.
And right into the kitchen. First time in a big hotel kitchen and a most interesting sight it is. So, big I had to ask directions twice before finding the entrance to the dining room. Then the lobby, where everything was calm, only a few realizing that the hotel was afire. Business as usual, and it kept right on the rest of the afternoon.
Here comes a reporter and there goes a photographer. A veritable parade of news hounds. A big story breaking and me on vacation. I just sat there in an easy chair and watched it all.

The BLOODHOUNDS BAY
By WALTER S. MASTERMAN
COPYRIGHTED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION
READ THIS FIRST:
Jack Reid, who has just witnessed the mysterious murder of Sir Henry Severinge in the chapel of his ancient abbey, is a ne'er-do-well who has lived by his wits since he left an orphanage. In the chapel to steal a valuable jeweled cross, Reid could not identify Sir Henry's slayer and could raise no alarm for fear of incriminating himself. Next day Reid, who has been posing as an itinerant painter working at the abbey, Colonel Graham, a neighbor, and Eric Colindale, agent of the estate who is in love with Lady Severinge, trace the missing Sir Henry to the chapel door by means of bloodhounds. The bloodhounds trace Sir Henry's scent to the coffin of his father in the crypt beneath the abbey chapel. Then Colonel Graham, owner of the bloodhounds, announces he will call in Scotland Yard. At the Yard, the colonel obtains the services of a young detective, Richard Selden. Back at the abbey, Colonel Graham, Selden and Hutchins, the local police official, go into the crypt and find Sir Henry's body in the coffin of his father. He had been stabbed to death. An urn, containing the ashes of Sir Henry's father, is also in the coffin where it had been placed at his death.
(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)
CHAPTER 10
THE SNUB annoyed the Colonel when the detective said he would prefer to stay at the local inn with Inspector Hutchins instead of with Graham. It was telling him plainly that Selden would not have the distinction drawn between himself and the inspector, and the latter registered a good mark to the detective for the courtesy.
"If you will kindly tell the constable to come here, we can send for the people we require in turn," Selden said as the other two went out.
"Damned young prig! I'll tell Boyle to send me someone with more experience and less conceit," Graham said, as he and Colindale walked along the corridor.
Directly the door was shut, Selden took a seat and motioned Hutchins to do the same.
"Look here, Inspector, I want to get this straight. I know you feel resentment at my being here. I'm only acting under orders; and we will work this thing together. You have vastly more experience than I have, and that will count; also, you have local knowledge. Shall we agree to do that?"
The frank, boyish smile disarmed the older man.
"Certainly." He was almost going to say "sir", but felt that once that word was used their positions would be no longer on an equality.
"Good. Colonel Graham has interfered in this matter and we have to do the best we can. It's a pity in some ways he used his nounds."
"But," Hutchins retorted, "if he hadn't we should never have found the body."
"Exactly," Selden looked at the other with a queer expression. "Perhaps it would have been better if we had not. You see now the murderer will be thoroughly warned and on his guard. If the disappearance had remained a mystery he might have disclosed himself."
"I don't follow you there."
"My dear fellow," Selden said with a note of impatience, "there is no question of robbery here; we can rule that out. There is also no question of a sudden quarrel, for the preparations must have been made already before the man was induced to go to the chapel. We have to delve into the whole circumstances, and into the past as well. Remember, there is no heir; the baronetcy terminates with Sir Henry's death. Graham told me that. We'll go into all that later. Before we call these people up I want to show you something."
Selden went to the desk and took a piece of paper, on which he rapidly sketched an outline of the Abbey, leaving the details to be filled in. He turned it over as the knock came at the door, and the village constable entered.
"Will you ask him to fetch Colindale," Selden whispered, and the inspector gave him a grateful look.
Eric Colindale came in, evidently in a sulky mood. Selden summed him up at a glance: he was ruffled and antagonistic.
"I'm so sorry," the detective said at once. "All these precautions were really unnecessary and you should have been able to go out; but I did not wish to annoy the Colonel by saying so. We shan't keep you longer than necessary." He turned the paper. "I wonder whether you could help us with this sketch—it's just a ground floor plan."
Selden watched the other keenly without appearing to do so, and saw a look of relief come to his face. He had expected an immediate and searching examination.
"With pleasure," he said at once, and took the paper. "Here is the gateway entrance that is part of the old manastery, in the center of the west side. The corridor once formed the cloisters, now bricked in—you can see the old pillars and arches in the brickwork. All this side has been rebuilt and contains the modern rooms, though even this is old as in the negative."
Along the north side is the old refectory of the monks, a fine arched hall, with lectern let into the wall for the 'reader'. It is never used now except on state occasions such as weddings and funerals. I believe about a century ago there used to be dances and many festivities, but now—"
"Sir Henry was more or less of a recluse, wasn't he?"
"In his latter years, yes. He suffered from gout, and a sort of melancholia, and hardly ever went out."
Hutchins was going to put a question, but felt a touch on his foot from Selden and restrained.
"That makes up most of the north side," Colindale went on, sketching the details in with a skilled hand, and writing in the names of the various rooms. "On the east are the servants' quarters, a regular rabbit warren, for it used to be the dwelling-place of the monks, and there are bake-houses and still-rooms and all the paraphernalia of an old country place that held great stores of food. . . I can't give you all the details—perhaps James could. He's the butler and lives there." The note of contempt did not escape Selden.
"That doesn't matter," Selden assured him.
"Then on the south side is the chapel and the ante-chapel, and the great library, which is seldom used now. That completes the quadrangle. The central court you have seen."
"Thank you. That will be of great assistance to us," Selden said, taking the paper. "You've been here some time?"
"Six years. I was out of a job. After Oxford I tried my hand as an architect and then did a bit of farming. I saw this post was going and applied for it."
"I suppose you can't throw any light on this affair?" Selden asked almost indifferently, as though he scarcely expected an answer.
"It's a complete mystery to me. I haven't seen Sir Henry since I last received my salary, over a week ago, and last night I slept like a top after a hard day on the estate. The first thing I knew was when James came to tell Lady Severinge that Sir Henry was missing."
"That would be . . ." Selden inquired softly, with half-closed eyes.
"In her sitting room; I had to discuss certain matters with her," Colindale retorted shortly, as though in challenge.
"Thank you. I really don't think we need detain you, unless the inspector wants to ask you anything." Again the pressure on his foot warned Hutchins to answer in the negative.
"Oh, by the way," Selden asked as Colindale rose, "that butler—has he been here long?"
The stiff, guarded manner dropped from the agent—he was easy and fluent. "I don't know how long he's been in this job, but I believe he was with Sir Henry for many years before he came here. He was his batman, and afterwards wandered all over the place with him as valet. As a matter of fact, I understand that Sir Henry, when young, was a bit of a rip. There are all sorts of strange stories about his doings, but I can't vouch for their truth. All I know is that the place was kept to ruin and the old man, his father, had a great difficulty in keeping it up. Everyone said it was because he had to pay off his son's debts and keep him out of England. The usual sort of story; but they had a shock."
"Really, this is most interesting," Selden said pleasantly.
"Sir Henry was summoned back as his father was dying, and arrived here just in time. He brought James with him. But the peculiar part of the whole story was that when the old baronet was dead he left hardly anything—what with taxes and losses he was very badly off. That was all shown clearly by the lawyer. He had not given a penny-piece to his son, Henry. But when Henry became Sir Henry, he was in ample funds, paid the death duties, had the whole place done up, and the estate laid out anew, and started off as a big county magnate."
"And then he married?" Selden asked casually.
"And then, as you say, he married," Colindale said, and his mouth set in a firm line.
"He changed completely—gave up everything and shut himself up in this room for the most part."
"Of course, in this case," Colindale said thoughtfully, "there may have been a reason. He was nearly killed once."
"An accident?"
"No."

Newlyweds Honored
With Supper Party

Mr., Mrs. Radcliff
Guests at Home
of Mack Parrett

A supper party of unusually attractive appointments was planned by Mack Parrett Jr., of E. Main street, Sunday evening, honoring Mr. and Mrs. William Radcliff, of Williamsport, who were married recently. Mr. Parrett's sister, Mrs. Brunelle P. Downing, acted as hostess.

The guests were invited for seven o'clock, and as soon as they assembled were asked to the dining room where a buffet supper was served.

The dining table was beautifully arranged for the affair, covered with a lace cloth and glittering with crystal and silver in the light of the many candles used on it.

After the supper was served, Mah Jongg was played in the living room, by three tables of players. At the conclusion of the games, prizes were won by Miss Radcliff, Dr. G. L. Hitler, and Will Hamilton, and a gift was presented the honor guests.

The guest list included Mr. and Mrs. Radcliff, Dr. and Mrs. Gay Hitler, Mrs. Howard B. Moore, Miss Margaret Mattinson, Miss Elizabeth Dunlap, Miss Mary Radcliff, William G. Hamilton, Frank Fischer, and the host and hostess.

Contract Bridge

One of the most enjoyable parties of the holiday season took place Saturday night when Mrs. George Foreman entertained at her home in S. Court street, at contract bridge.

Sixteen of her friends were invited for the evening of play. When the scores were tallied, Mrs. Turney Weldon received the traveling prize. The members of one of Circleville's bridge clubs had been included in the guest list, and the club prize was won by Mrs. R. R. Bales. The guest prize was presented to Mrs. Harry Jackson.

A salad course was served at the small tables, which had been attractively arranged for the lunch.

Mrs. Campbell McMordie was a guest from out-of-town.

Family Dinner

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Brobst, and daughter Miss Ethel, of S. Pickaway street, entertained at a family dinner on Sunday. Included in the guests list were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Brobst and family, Mr. and Mrs. Floy Brobst and family, of Washington township.

Chicken Dinner

A chicken dinner will be served at the Washington township school Wednesday evening, December 3, at 6 o'clock. The dinner will be sponsored by the Parent-Teachers Association of Washington township.

Ladies' Aid

Mrs. Ralph Boggs, of Pickaway township, will entertain the members of the Emmitt's Chapel Ladies' Aid society at her home Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Mrs. D. C. Rader and Mrs. Evan Boggs will be assisting hostesses. This will be the Christmas meeting, and members are requested to take inexpensive gifts for exchange.

Wedding Anniversary

At a family dinner held at their home in S. Washington street, Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Leslie May quietly celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding.

Birthday Dinner

In honor of the fortieth birthday anniversary of her husband, Mrs. Joe Moats, E. Ohio street, arranged a surprise dinner Sunday. Many relatives and friends were entertained.

Among those included in the guest list were Mr. and Mrs. Ater Arnold and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Cowdrey, Mr. and Mrs. Reynold Newsman, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Gault, of Washington C. H.; Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Moats, Mr.

Newlyweds Honored
With Supper Party

Mr., Mrs. Radcliff
Guests at Home
of Mack Parrett

A supper party of unusually attractive appointments was planned by Mack Parrett Jr., of E. Main street, Sunday evening, honoring Mr. and Mrs. William Radcliff, of Williamsport, who were married recently. Mr. Parrett's sister, Mrs. Brunelle P. Downing, acted as hostess.

The guests were invited for seven o'clock, and as soon as they assembled were asked to the dining room where a buffet supper was served.

The dining table was beautifully arranged for the affair, covered with a lace cloth and glittering with crystal and silver in the light of the many candles used on it.

After the supper was served, Mah Jongg was played in the living room, by three tables of players. At the conclusion of the games, prizes were won by Miss Radcliff, Dr. G. L. Hitler, and Will Hamilton, and a gift was presented to the honor guests.

The guest list included Mr. and Mrs. Radcliff, Dr. and Mrs. G. L. Hitler, and Mrs. Howard B. Moore, Miss Margaret Mattinson, Miss Elizabeth Dunlap, Miss Mary Radcliff, William G. Hamilton, Frank Fischer, and the host and hostess.

Contract Bridge

One of the most enjoyable parties of the holiday season took place Saturday night when Mrs. George Foreman entertained at her home in S. Court street, at contract bridge.

Sixteen of her friends were invited for the evening of play. When the scores were tallied, Mrs. Turney Weldon received the traveling prize. The members of one of Circleville's bridge clubs had been included in the guest list, and the club prize was won by Mrs. R. R. Bales. The guest prize was presented to Mrs. Harry Jackson.

A salad course was served at the small tables, which had been attractively arranged for the lunch.

Mrs. Campbell McMordie was a guest from out-of-town.

Family Dinner

Startling cleaning facts found by the Pittsburgh Testing Laboratory

Here are the sensational facts about electric cleaners, just confirmed by an investigation made by the Pittsburgh Testing Laboratory.

ORDINARY VACUUM CLEANERS—cleaners depending upon suction alone or suction plus a scraping brush: specimens of a popular cleaner of this type removed only 36% as much dirt as The Hoover.

CLEANERS WITH SUCTION AND A MOTOR-DRIVEN BRUSH—cleaners which add a sweeping action to suction: specimens of this type removed only 75% as much dirt as The Hoover.

THE HOOVER—combining with suction and sweeping an exclusive beating action, Positive Agitation: gets out nearly 3 times as much dirt as suction alone and one-third more than suction and sweeping.

Before you buy any cleaner, look at The Hoover! See for yourself why the above statements are true. Only $6.25 down; balance monthly. Liberal allowance for your old electric cleaner. Let us send one to your home for a demonstration.

AL HAFT COMES TO AID OF CLUB IN WINTER CARD

Stacey Hall to Tangle With Pete Sherman in Main-Go; Spike Ashby Booked

DON FERGUSON TO BOX

Eddie Watson to Take on Rough Columbus Foe

A 5-bout wrestling and boxing card, with the grunTERS outnumbering the clouters, was announced Monday by the Circleville Athletic Club for Monday evening, Dec. 7.

Al Haft, prominent Columbus promoter, is co-operating with the Athletic Club by providing the grapplers. All are guaranteed to appear, and to put on good performances.

The No. 1 bout will find Stacey Hall matched with Pete Sherman. No. 2 puts Sandy McDonald against Henry Hill, and No. 3 finds Eddie Watson, who did well in his first ring appearance two weeks ago, against rough and tough Spike Ashby.

The fistic parade will feature Doc Ferguson, heavyweight amateur champion, and Glenn Weaver in the main-go, and Jimmy Emmerine and Bob Alexander, two willing youngsters, in the preliminary.

While most of the men booked for wrestling have been seen by local ring enthusiasts, the best-known is Stacey Hall, graduate of Ohio State university and rated as the best welter in the Big Ten in the last 10 years.

Hall is a Columbus boy, and

Bob Herwig, California

STRONGEST, most massive link in University of California's great line this year was Bob Herwig, giant center.

When we said Bob was a giant we meant just that. He weighs 210 and stands six feet three inches.

Bob played seasonally last year as a sophomore—and has turned in an even better performance this year. He already has made one all-American first team at the snapper-back post and will run Walter Gilbert of Auburn, Gil Kuhn of Southern California and Mike Basrak of Duquesne a close race for honors on mythical teams.

NEWARK, N. J., Nov. 30—(UP)—Donald Lash held his third consecutive 10,000 meters A.A.U. cross-country championship today and Indiana had regained team honors for the event they lost five years ago.

Lash, the lanky Indiana senior, led his mates to a perfect team victory yesterday for the first time in the history of the event, pacing Tommy Deckard to the finish tape by 350 yards.

UPSETS PREVAIL AS GRID SEASON NEARS ITS END

Navy and Columbia Win; Nearly All Favored Schools Beaten

SANTA CLARA ALONE

Defeats of Gophers, Pitt Bring Surprises

NEW YORK, Nov. 30 — (UP)—Another football season has ended, but the memory of its many startling upsets remained today to plague the "experts."

Favorite eleven refused to play true to form and left the so-called experts directly behind the eight ball Saturday after Saturday. Underdogs knocking off the logical winners became a national pastime and the season will be recorded by sportswriters at least, as "the black autumn of '36."

Except for a few remaining encounters, the season closed with a dramatic climax as Navy torpedoed Army 7 to 0. This was not an upset, but non-conformity persisted even on the final day of firing when Lou Little's Columbia Lions fought a highly favored Stanford team to a standstill and came out on top by the same margin as a result of George Furey's 80-yard runback of the opening kickoff for a touchdown.

Texas Christian Favored. This miscalculation, however, was mild compared to some of the season's earlier unexpected results leaving little Santa Clara the nation's only undefeated, untied record. And the Broncos still have to hurdle Texas Christian in a post-season after Dec. 12.

There seemed to be no team capable of stopping Minnesota's winning streak when the season began, but Northwestern turned the trick only to be beaten by twice-defeated Notre Dame. Then there were Ohio State's big red raiders who romped over N.Y.U. 60 to 0. Pitt's Panthers quickly quieted that threat, and Pitt was defeated unexpectedly by Ohio State. West Virginia Wesleyan wrecked the "Dukes" bandwagon. Fordham's Rams went undefeated until their last game when their fighting intra-city rivals, N.Y.U. Violets, took a 7-6 decision. One of the most unlooked for results was Holy Cross being held to a 0-0 deadlock by St. Anselm's, playing its second year of Collegiate football.

PACKERS CLAIM WESTERN TITLE AS BEARS LOSE

BY UNITED PRESS Professional football interest turned to the east today to anticipate whether the western champion Green Bay Packers of the National League will meet the Boston Red Skins or the New York Giants in the championship playoff.

The Packers clinched their division title with a 26 to 17 victory over last year's champion Detroit Lions while the Chicago Bears were losing to their intra-city rivals, the Cardinals. Boston took the leadership of the eastern group from Pittsburgh by goose-egging the Pirates, 30 to 0, but the Giants can win the division championship with a victory over the Red Skins next Sunday.

Last hope of the Bears to beat out the Packers was killed today when they fell before the Cardinals, 14 to 7.

About This And That In Many Sports

Wonder Bubble Bursts

This Waterloo athletic fund stink is becoming more obnoxious each day with charges flowing freely from Magellan Hairston, former coach; the state auditor's office, and Dr. J. D. Swango, president of the board of education — Hairston is charged with shortage of about $3,000 in the school's athletic funds; he says Dr. Swango used part of it in traveling, and the good doctor denies it all — Whether the money was used by Hairston, Swango or Dracula is neither here nor there, but the Waterloo Wonder bubble is burst, and Hairston is out of a job. ***

Tigers Start Saturday

Tiger cagers resume work today on a real task — They open their schedule Saturday evening at Jackson township school against a steadily-improving team coached by Carroll Woodruff — Coach Jack Landrum is building his 1936-37 edition around Don Henry, and is finding it difficult since experienced cagers are nil. ***

Pressnell to Retire?

Although professional football interest waned in Circleville when the Portsmouth Spartan franchise was removed to Detroit, there are many persons who enjoy reading about the game and who would like to see it rejuvenated in Ohio — Detroit has been sliding this year, and now is definitely out of the pennant race after falling 17 to 26 at the hands of the Green Bay Packers — Bob Hooley, acquainted with the Spartans for a long while, believes many of the gridgers are ready to step out of action — One of the greatest, Glenn Pressnell, is ready to give up after a great career as a backfield star — Pressnell played quarterback on the Nebraska team that handed the great Notre Dame crew, which boasted Stuhldreher, Layden, Crowley and Miller, a beating. ***

KENTUCKY FIVE TO PLAY HEAVY SCHEDULE AGAIN

LEXINGTON, Ky., Nov. 30 — (UP)—Long one of Dixie's top ranked basketball schools and with a team which has figured in national title consideration in recent seasons, the University of Kentucky seeks to foster championship hopes again this season with a representative 15-game schedule. Kentucky's powerful team was topped only four times during a lengthy schedule a year ago. The Wildcats fell before Creighton, Notre Dame, Tulane and New York University.

Coached by Adolph Rupp, Kentucky will have an opportunity to avenge each of those defeats this year, excepting that at the hands of N.Y.U. After two consecutive invasions of the east, the Wildcats will not return to Madison Square Garden this season.

Kentucky's schedule calls for it to meet leading southern, mid-western and western quintets. To meet the tests, Kentucky will have nine lettermen back in addition to a group of promising players from a freshman team that won 15 out of 16 contests.

Three of Kentucky's veterans also were members of the Wildcats football team and will not be used in early season games.

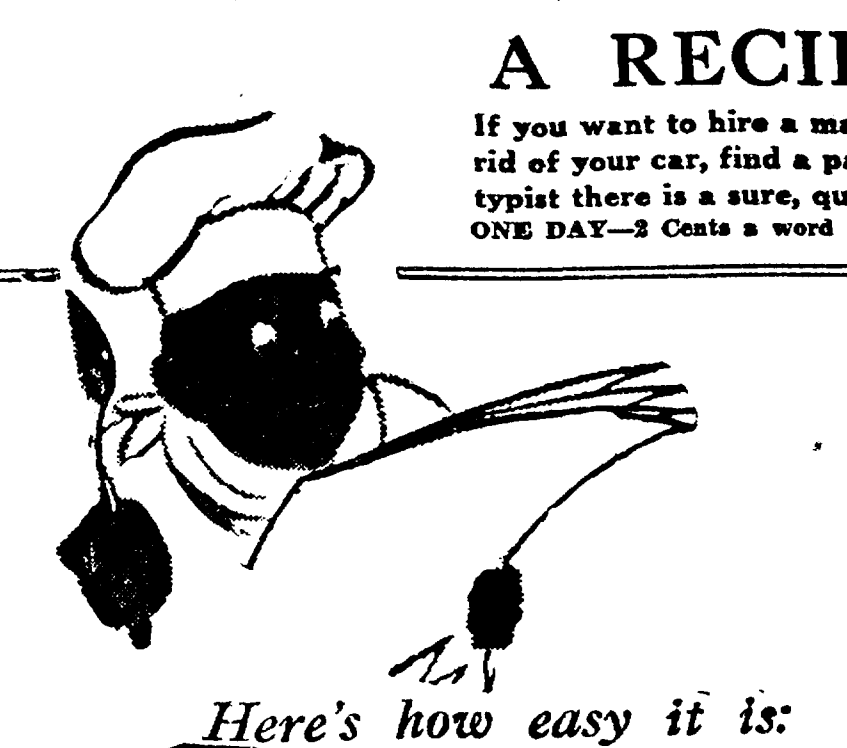

For the opening games, Rupp will rely on an all veteran team that has been drilling for the past month. It will be drawn from James "Red" Hogan, and Ralph Carlisle, forwards; Rice Walker, center; Capt. Warfield Donahue, James Gorfath, and Russell Ellington, guards.

LANDIS RULES TWO ATHLETES FREE AGENTS

CHICAGO, Nov. 30 — (UP)—Baseball Commissioner K. M. Landis settled the first of a series of player contract disputes in the major leagues Sunday by declaring Lee Handley and John G. Peacock, Cincinnati infielders, free agents at liberty to contract with any club except the Reds or their affiliates. Handley signed with Toronto as a free agent in 1935, went to the Reds the same season, and was recalled to Cincinnati from Toronto again last fall. Peacock was optioned by Toronto to Nashville and later assigned by Nashville to Cincinnati.

ECKMANN SILENT ABOUT Foe FOR WASHINGTON 11

SEATTLE, Wash., Nov. 30 — (UP)—Much free advice was offered by fans today on the eastern team that should be selected for Washington university's opponent in the Pasadena Rose Bowl game, but Ray Eckmann, who will announce the choice, gave no indication that he was listening. Eckmann, graduate manager of the Huskies, refused to divulge even which football sector he had in mind.

Fans and sports writers believed the bid would go south, to either Alabama or Louisiana State, but there were those who held out for Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania and Dartmouth also received some scattered attention.

ROSE BOWL HAS EXILES PASADENA, Cal. (UP)—Two Pasadena youths will not be permitted to witness a football game in the famous Rose Bowl for at least two years to come. They were caught smashing electric light bulbs in the tunnel leading to the Bowl, and the judge sentenced them to two years of exile as far as the Bowl is concerned.

Bees are subject to a number of diseases which can spread through the hive with great destructive force.

AL HAFT COMES TO AID OF CLUB IN WINTER CARD

Stacey Hall to Tangle With Pete Sherman in Main-Go; Spike Ashby Booked

DON FERGUSON TO BOX

Eddie Watson to Take on Rough Columbus Foe

A 5-bout wrestling and boxing card, with the gruntings outnumbering the clouters, was announced Monday by the Cincinnati Athletic Club for Monday evening, Dec. 7.

Al Haft, prominent Columbus promoter, is co-operating with the Athletic Club by providing the grapplers. All are guaranteed to appear, and to put on good performances.

The No. 1 bout will find Stacey Hall matched with Pete Sherman. No. 2 puts Sandy McDonald against Henry Hill, and No. 3 finds Eddie Watson, who did well in his first ring appearance two weeks ago, against rough and tough Spike Ashby.

The fistic parade will feature Doc Ferguson, heavyweight amateur champion, and Glenn Weaver in the main-go, and Jimmy Emerine and Bob Alexander, two willing youngsters, in the preliminary.

While most of the men booked for wrestling have been seen by local ring enthusiasts, the best-known is Stacey Hall, graduate of Ohio State university and rated as the best welter in the Big Ten in the last 10 years.

Hall is a Columbus boy, and

When we said Bob was a giant we meant just that. He weighs 210 and stands six feet three inches.

Bob played sensationally last year—as a sophomore—and has turned in an even better performance this year. He already has made one all-American first team at the snapper-back post and will run Walter Gilbert of Auburn, Gil Kuhn of Southern California and Mike Basrak of Duquesne a close race for honors on mythical teams.

UPSETS PREVAIL AS GRID SEASON NEARS ITS END

Navy and Columbia Win; Nearly All Favored Schools Beaten

SANTA CLARA ALONE

Defeats of Gophers, Pitt Bring Surprises

NEW YORK, Nov. 30—(UP)—Another football season has ended, but the memory of its many startling upsets remained today to plague the "experts."

Favorite eleven refused to play true to form and left the so-called experts directly behind the eight ball Saturday after Saturday. Underdogs knocking off the logical winners became a national pastime and the season will be recorded, by Sportswriters at least, as "the black autumn of '36."

Except for a few remaining encounters, the season closed with a dramatic climax as Navy torpedoed Army 7 to 0. This was not an upset, but non-conformity persisted even on the final day of firing when Lou Little's Columbia Lions fought a highly favored Stanford team to a standstill and came out on top by the same margin as a result of George Furey's 80-yard runback of the opening kickoff for a touchdown.

Texas Christian Favored This miscalculation, however, was mild compared to some of the season's earlier unexpected results leaving little Santa Clara the nation's only undefeated, untied record. And the Broncos still have to hurdle Texas Christian in a post-season after Dec. 12.

There seemed to be no team capable of stopping Minnesota's winning streak when the season began, but Northwestern turned the trick only to be beaten by twice-defeated Notre Dame. Then there were Ohio State's big red raiders who romped over N.Y.U. 60 to 0. Pitt's Panthers quickly quieted that threat, and Pitt was defeated unexpectedly by little Duquesne. West Virginia Wesleyan wrecked the "Duke's" bandwagon. Fordham's Rams went undefeated until their last game when their fighting intra-city rivals, N.Y.U. Violets, took a 7-6 decision. One of the most unlooked for results was Holy Cross being held to a 0-0 deadlock by St. Anselm's, playing its second year of Collegiate football.

PACKERS CLAIM WESTERN TITLE AS BEARS LOSE

BY UNITED PRESS Professional football interest turned to the east today to anticipate whether the western champion Green Bay Packers of the National league will meet the Boston Red Skins or the New York Giants in the championship playoff.

The Packers clinched their division title with a 26 to 17 victory over last year's champion Detroit Lions while the Chicago Bears were losing to their intra-city rivals, the Cardinals. Boston took the leadership of the eastern group from Pittsburgh by goose-egging the Pirates, 30 to 0, but the Giants can win the division championship with a victory over the Red Skins next Sunday.

Last hope of the Bears to beat out the Packers was killed today when they fell before the Cardinals, 14 to 7.

Wonder Bubble Bursts

This Waterloo athletic fund stink is becoming more obnoxious each day with charges flowing freely between Magellan Hairston, former coach; the state auditor's office, and Dr. J. D. LOGICAL CHOICE BETWEEN NO TRUMP AND SUIT

HERE IS AN extract from a letter, asking a question that troubles nearly all players at times. "Will you inform me how to choose logically between an opening bid of no trump and a suit, when not informed what method partner prefers."

The essence of partnership bidding is to inform partner as quickly and as fully as possible concerning the type of hand held and the number of biddable suits, while posing it. Without denying holding a biddable 4-card suit, an opening bid of 1-No Trump should mean on its face a 4-3-3-3 division among the four suits, with stops in at least three of the suits. That means you hold at least three cards of any suit partner chooses to show, with at least 3 in 4 chances that you hold not less strength than an honor of partner's suit.

Make an opening bid of 1-No Trump on each of the three hands shown below.

- 1—963 KJ85
AK6 A74
2—AKQ74 AKQ6
K73 J65
3—A72 AK73
AQ6 QJ8

Common sense warns against bidding 2-No Trumps, over partner's suit take-out, unless his bid (assuming it to show guards to that suit) leaves no unstopped suit between you. For example: partner takes out your bid of 1-No Trump on Hand 1, with 2-Spades. Bid 2-No Trumps, showing all suits guarded. If he bids 2-Clubs, instead of 2-Spades, it may be unwise to at once bid 2-No Trumps, as spades may be run against you.

so bid 2-Clubs, telling partner that you hold 4 of the suit, and have one suit which is unguarded. If he bids 2-Hearts, instead of either 2-Spades or 2-Clubs, support his hearts, but avoid 2-No Trumps. In case partner bids 2-Hearts, when you have bid 1-No Trump on Hand 2, bid 2-Spades. He may be able to support that suit, or he may be able to then bid 3-Clubs, permitting you to justly shift into 3-No Trumps. With Hand 3, overall partner's take-out of 2-Clubs, with 2-Diamonds, but you may bid 2-No Trumps, over his take-out of 2-Hearts. The principle is very simple.

A two-suiter does not average to play as well as no trumps as at one of the suits, even if those suits contain only 4 cards each, such as Hand 4 has.

- 4—AKQ63 A6
AJ94 QJ7

Open the bidding with 1-Spade, then bid 2-Hearts over partner's 2-Diamonds or 2-Clubs. If partner then bids three in his minor suit or in the other minor suit, instead of supporting one of your major suits, try 3-No Trumps next. With all suits doubly stopped from opening leads from the left, and a probable total of seven tricks, bid 2-No Trumps, unless a major suit offers game chances. Bid Hand 5 that way, but Hand 6 should be opened with 1-Heart.

- 5—AKQ6 KQJ73
KJ10 AK
6—AKQ6 KJ10
KQJ73 AK

The reason for bidding Hand 6 only 1-Heart is that game cannot be promised at some call on the hand. It is deception of partner to bid two.

LOGICAL CHOICE BETWEEN NO TRUMP AND SUIT

HERE IS an extract from a letter, asking a question that troubles nearly all players at times. "Will you inform me how to choose logically between an opening bid of no trump and a suit, when not informed what method partner prefers."

The essence of partnership bidding is to inform partner as quickly and as fully as possible concerning the type of hand held and the number of biddable suits composing it. Without denying holding a biddable 4-card suit, an opening bid of 1-No Trump should mean on its face a 4-3-3-3 division among the four suits, with stops in at least three of the suits. That means you hold at least three cards of any suit partner chooses to show, with at least 3 in 4 chances that you hold not less strength than an honor of partner's suit.

Make an opening bid of 1-No Trump on each of the three hands shown below.

- 1—♠ 9 6 3 ♠ K J 8 5
- 2—♠ A K 6 ♠ A 7 4
- 3—♠ A 7 2 ♠ A Q 6
- 4—♠ A 6 4 ♠ J 6 5
- 5—♠ A 7 2 ♠ A K 7 3
- 6—♠ Q 6 4 ♠ Q J 8

Common sense warns against bidding 2-No Trumps, over partner's suit take-out, unless his bid (assuming it to show guards to that suit) leaves no unstopped suit between you. For example: partner takes out your bid of 1-No Trump on Hand 1, with 2-Spades. Bid 2-No Trumps, showing all suits guarded. If he bids 2-Clubs, instead of 2-Spades, it may be unwise to at once bid 2-No Trumps, as spades may be run against you.

so bid 2-Diamonds, telling partner that you hold 4 of the suit, and have one suit which is unguarded. If he bids 2-Hearts, instead of either 2-Spades or 2-Clubs, support his hearts, but avoid 2-No Trumps. In case partner bids 2-Hearts, when you have bid 1-No Trump on Hand 2, bid 2-Spades. He may be able to support that suit, or he may be able to then bid 3-Clubs, permitting you to justly shift into 3-No Trumps. With Hand 3, overall partner's take-out of 2-Clubs, with 2-Diamonds, but you may bid 2-No Trumps, over his take-out of 2-Hearts. The principle is very simple.

LAND STEEL WORKERS SEEK WAGE INCREASE

2,000 Sit Down Awaiting End of Deadlock; Long Confab Fruitless

MARTIN IN CLEVELAND

Men Play Cards, Listen to Radio in Factory

DETROIT, Nov. 30 — (UP) — The differences between the Midland Steel company and its 2,000 sit-down strikers widened today as both hurriedly planned a fourth attempt to break a three-day-old deadlock.

Union workers, demanding a uniform 10 per cent wage increase, apparently were unconcerned by failure of a four-hour conference last night. The company already has granted union recognition and has agreed to fix maximum hour standards.

Gordon Stoner, vice president and general manager of Midland and Edward Hall, second vice president of the United Automobile Workers Union, scheduled another meeting at 10:30 a. m. today.

Meanwhile, activity increased along other sectors of the automotive labor front while the Midland "sit-downers" feasted, played cards and listened to the radio in workshops that had been humming with the drone of busy machines.

Homer Martin, president of the UAWU, was due in Cleveland for a conference with officials of the Fisher body works plant there over demands for increased pay and better working conditions. A meeting of organizers from General Motors plants throughout the country, which Martin called last week, may adjourn today with plans for pushing the union's organization drive deeper into the automobile industry.

BAREFOOT HABIT URGED

BOSTON (UP) — Children should play barefoot on soft ground during the formative period, according to Dr. Fred T. Reiss. Speaking before the Massachusetts Chiropractic Association, Dr. Reiss said hard floors and pavements cause foot trouble in later years, and that no foot appliance can replace outdoor play in bare feet on yielding surfaces.
